Daihonzan Engakuji-Temple

This temple was built under the tutelage of Chinese monk Mugaku Sogen in 1282 in the Kamakura era. It is the Daihonzan (head temple) of the Rinzai sect, called Engaku-ji Temple, and is the second greatest temple of the five great Rinzai temples of Kamakura. It is an old temple which has a lot of classic architectural structures such as the nationally treasured temple bell, and the reliquary hall.

Kitakamakura Old Private House Museum

This is an exhibition space featured within the old Japanese-style house. While there are permanent collections of originally created dolls, they also feature seasonal events and exhibitions. One of the permanent collections is the doll exhibition called "The family in Showa era", created by Akemi Abe.
