A sign of Autumn:
the Japanese silver grass of Hakone's Sengokuhara

Fields of Japanese Silver Grass

Explanation of Tourist Attraction

Sengokuhara's Japanese silver grass fields are said to be the largest in the Kanto region. They spread out around the southern foot of Mount Ashigara and in a band around the western foot of Mount Daigatake. From the end of September to the beginning of November, the tops of the grass turn a golden color, turning the mountainside into a beautiful scene - a sign of Autumn at Sengokuhara. This is one of the many scenes representing Hakone in Autumn.
