横浜にぎわい座・横浜能楽堂

Once, Yokohama was lined with entertainment halls and theaters and was a brilliant sight to behold through the year. Even now, they hold a "Noge Street Performance" every year in front of Sakuragicho station in Noge. Many people with various talents gather here from all over Japan. There are also "Yokohama Nigiwai-za", a hall where they perform public entertainment such as rakugo (traditional Japanese comic storytelling) and manzai (stand-up comedy), and "Yokohama Noh Theater", where they hold workshops and classes in addition to performing noh (traditional musical drama) and kyogen (traditional comic theater). Please call or visit their websites for program details.

Hasedera Temple 長谷寺

According to legend, in 721 AD the pious monk Tokudo Shonin discovered a large camphor tree in the mountain forests near the village of Hase in the Nara region. He realized that the trunk of the tree was large enough to provide sufficient material for carving two statues of the eleven-headed Kannon. The statue he commissioned to be carved from the lower part of the tree was enshrined in Hasedera Temple near Nara; the statue from the upper half (actually the larger of the two) was thrown into the sea with a prayer that it would reappear to save the people. Fifteen years later, in 736 on the night of June 18, it washed ashore at Nagai Beach on the Miura Peninsula not far from Kamakura, sending out rays of light as it did. The statue was then brought to Kamakura and a temple was constructed to honor it. Since time immemorial, Hasedera Temple has been known as the 4th station among the 33 holy places in the Kanto area.

Kamakurabori (Kamakura Carving) 鎌倉彫

Kamakurabori is a style of carved lacquerware and a specialty of Kamakura City, that is crafted by carving wood, applying black lacquer, and then applying colored lacquer such as vermilion, blue, or yellow on top. Originally used to make articles for Buddhist rituals, this artform has been passed down for over 800 years. In the Kamakurabori Museum, where about 50 classic and contemporary works of kamakurabori are displayed, a video showing the process of making kamakurabori is played continuously, and a workshop where you can try your hand at kamakurabori carving is also held. On the first floor, there is a gift shop/cafe/gallery where you can enjoy the charm of kamakurabori in the relaxing atmosphere.

Please contact for inquiry and apply for the workshop by e-mail.

Enoshima Iwaya Cave 江の島岩屋

Two touristy and easily walkable caves can be found in the cliffs along Enoshima's southern coast. The first cave contains some Buddhist statues, while the second cave is dedicated to the legendary dragon that used to terrorize the area. The cave was formed by the continuous movement of waves. It features mysterious sound effects and lighting.

Kotoku-in Temple (Great Buddha "Daibutsu") 鎌倉大仏殿高德院

The statue commonly known as Kamakura Daibutsu (Great Buddha of Kamakura), a colossal copper image of Amida-butsu (Amitabha Buddha), is the principle image of Kotoku-in. The fact that it sits in the open air makes it unusual amongst large Buddha statues in Japan. The Great Buddha, designated as a National Treasure by the Japanese government, is about 11.3 meters tall and weighs around 121 tons. Though in size it falls short of the Great Buddha of Todai-ji Temple at Nara (an image of Rushana-butsu [Vairocana Buddha]), it essentially retains its original form; as such it is an invaluable example of Japanese historical Buddhist art. Today, 750 years after its construction, vast numbers of Buddhists of all sects from around the world and Japan come to pay their respects to the Great Buddha.

Kenchoji Temple 巨福山 建長興国禅寺

This Zen Buddhist temple is the head temple of the Kencho sect of the Rinza school. It was founded in the year 1253 by Tokiyori Hojo. The temple is dedicated to the bodhisattva Jizo (Kshitigarbha). The grounds are designated as a national historic site under the name "Kenchoji Keidai". With cherry blossoms, hydrangea, autumn leaves, and so on, the natural colors of each season here are charming. In addition, it is connected to the Tenen hiking course from the priests' temple quarters in the inner part of the site.

Zeniarai Benzaiten Ugafuku Shrine 銭洗弁財天宇賀福神社

Zeniarai Bentein Shrine is a popular shrine in Kamakura, which people visit to wash their money (zeniarai means "coin washing"). It is said that money washed in the shrine's spring, doubles. Minamoto Yoritomo, the founder of the Kamakura government, ordered the shrine's construction after a god appeared in his dream and recommended him to build the shrine in order to bring peace to the country. Because the dream occurred on the day of the snake, in the month of the snake of the year of the snake, the shrine was later also dedicated to Bentein, a Buddhist goddess associated with snakes.

One Point Manner 2 How to worship at a shrine or a temple

① When you visit a shrine or a temple, first clean your hands and rinse your mouth at the purification fountain of chozuya generally set at the side of the path or near the entrance.

② When you reach in front of the altar, gently throw a coin into the offertory box installed.

③ If there is a bell or a gong attached by rope, pull on that rope to ring it.

④ At a shrine ④ At a temple

Make two bows to the god and clap your hands twice. Then, pray with your hands together. At the end, make a deep bow again.

Make a deep bow, and pray with your hands together. Make sure that you do not clap your hands like the way of shrine worship.

Sightseeing Spots in Hakone & Odawara

箱根 小田原の観光スポット

Odawara Castle

小田原城

Odawara Castle is probably the best example of a castle to visit in the immediate Tokyo area. The museum in the main keep has a nice collection of artifacts, armor, and weapons. They have also done a great job reconstructing some gates and maintaining the castle grounds. This castle was the family residence of feudal lord Hojo. You can retrace the mighty steps of feudal lords in this elegant place which has come through the Edo age to the present day. Take a step back in time with feudal costumes - at the Tokiwagi gate of the castle, you can hire (for a fee) samurai armour and kimono and have your photograph taken wearing the outfit, with the castle in the background. It will be a wonderful souvenir of your visit.

Hakone Hot Springs

箱根温泉

One of Japan's foremost hot spring areas, Hakone traces its history back 1,300 years, when the first hot spring was discovered here. The area is home to some seventeen major hot springs, collectively known as the 'Hakone Ju-nana-To', each with different mineral composition and benefits. Amongst these seventeen, seven have particularly long traditions. These seven are, Yumoto, Tonosawa, Miyanoshita, Dogashima, Sokokura, Kiga, and Ashinoyu.

Made in Odawara: The Local Specialty Products of Odawara

小田原の特産品

Odawara, where the ocean and mountains meet in mild climate, has many local specialties. From the ocean, fish meat is ground and steamed to produce "kamaboko" (fish cake), and whole fish are sun-dried to make "himono". From the mountains, orange and lemon crops are grown, and plums are pickled to make their famous umeboshi. Since they have prospered as a post station and castle town from long ago, you can still see traditional techniques in their popular souvenirs, such as "Odawara-chochin" (lantern), "yosegi zaiku" (wood mosaic) and "Odawara-shikki" (lacquerware).

Owakudani Valley

大涌谷

One of the most popular sightseeing spots in Hakone. This area was created during the great collapse of Kami-yama, the highest of the Hakone volcano complex about 3,000 years ago; a phreatic eruption in 2015 created a new crater. Fumarolic gases envelop the desolate ground to this day, and you can feel the intensity of an active volcano. This place is also a popular viewing point for Mt. Fuji. *Due to the volcano activity, you might not be able to enter the area. Please check the detail at Hakone-machi website. >> www.town.hakone.kanagawa.jp There is also the "Hakone Geo Museum" in front of Owakudani Station, where you can experience the wonder and fascination of the Hakone Volcano.

Hakone Jinja Shrine

箱根神社

Hakone Jinja Shrine is famous for its Shinto shrine archway of Peace, which was founded in its current location in 757 based on a revelation of the priest Mangan. Mangan was a famous priest who trained in strict ascetic practices and pacified the nine-headed dragon that lived at the bottom of Lake Ashi, and his story is still handed down to people today. On the way to the shrine, there is a treasure house where Hakone Gongen Engi Emaki, Mangan Shonin Zazou, historical handwritings, picture scrolls and sculptures that include five items which are ranked as National Important Cultural Property are on exhibit. This shrine is also known as one of Japan's foremost spiritual places.

Hakone Check Point Exhibition Hall

箱根関所

Tokugawa shogun placed 53 sekisho (facility for inspection) on major roads across the nation to defend Edo (current Tokyo). Hakone Sekisho was one of the largest and was thought to be important among them. Hakone Sekisho was placed on the current location in 1619, during an early period of Edo Era. One of the main roles of sekisho was to control 'incoming guns and outgoing women', which means to prevent weapons from being brought into Edo and wives and children of feudal lords from fleeing from Edo. However, Hakone Sekisho did not inspect 'incoming guns', and severely inspected 'outgoing women'. Sekisho, which operated for about 260 years during Edo Era, was dissolved in the next year of 1868, when the government changed.

Yosegi zaiku (Wood mosaic)

寄木細工

The mountain area of Hakone is well known for its diverse variety of trees. Artisans began making these wood works in geometric patterns bringing out the natural colors of wood at Hatajuku of Hakone Mountain in the Late Edo period. In recent years, young craftsmen to create a work of innovative design, it has been noted by many people. Because there are many shops which sell the new designs created based on traditional works in Hakone, let's stop by to look for souvenirs. Tourists can also easily experience making wood works like coasters.

Their popular item is a hot spring steamed bun, 'Hakone no Otsukisama'. They use ingredients that are good for your health, such as kokutou (a type of brown sugar) from Okinawa, wasanbon (a fine-grained Japanese sugar) from Tokushima and red beans from Tokachi, Hokkaido, then steam them for 20 minutes using a traditional method. They have a flavor that makes you smile! They also have sister stores in the neighborhood and around Odawara Station. Please call for details.

Beer ビール

Hakone Kuzuryu Beer 箱根九頭龍麦酒

Once upon a time, there was a legendary dragon called Kuzuryu (nine-headed dragon) who became a ryujin (dragon god) due to Mangan Jonin's prayers. This local Hakone beer bears the great ryujin Kuzuryu's name. Try adding this ale — fruity, richly fragrant, with just the right amount of body, and a refreshing, delicious aftertaste — to the memories of your trip. A sacred beverage dedicated to the gods, please enjoy the mysterious flavor of this beer to your heart's content.

You can purchase at station kiosks, liquor stores, and souvenir shops around Hakone-machi. Also order at ryokan, hotels and restaurants.
